

DESTINATION: SERVICE-LEARNING

A World of Resources

START

87% of faculty teaching service-learning courses believe it greatly benefits students' interpersonal skills

90% of faculty teaching service-learning courses implemented it based on personal interest in organization/ community

Community engagement is included in USF's strategic priorities

75% of students agree that service-learning classes are more interesting than other classes

The Office of Community Engagement and Partnerships serves the community, students and faculty alike. If you are a USF faculty member interested in implementing service-learning into your course curriculum OCEP can be of assistance to you! OCEP offers the knowledge, guidance and support needed to enhance your service-learning teaching initiative.

Visit the Office of Community Engagement and Partnerships located in the Allen Building (ALN 185) or www.usf.edu/engagement for more information and assistance.

OCEP will pave the way to a successful service-learning experience for you, your students and community partners.

All you have to do is start.

OCEP

